April 2017

Friday, April 28, 2017: Gold Star Mothers presented by Gale French

Public Invited. Join us at 6:30pm for socializing.

We meet at the University Baptist Church (UBC) in the Chapel on the 1st floor (16106 Middlebrook Drive, Houston, TX 77059 - online map).

Learn how to research Gold Star Mothers, American women who lost sons or daughters in service of the US Armed Forces. Gale French has been interested in genealogy for over 25 years. He researched and self-published a 600 page family history book on his grandmother's Elliott family line that came from England to Texas, fought in the Texas Revolution and received land for their service. He traced ten generations of Elliotts and their descendants. He presented at the 2014 and 2015 Roots Tech conferences in Salt Lake City and has presented self-publishing and Google Earth programs to the BAGS membership. He received the Pioneers in Space Technical Achievement Award from the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Gale French

Gale currently teaches “Beginner Y-DNA Basics” online classes through the YDNA Adoption and DNAGedcom, a source of inexpensive training. His next three week class starts July 7. Checkout the classes offered at <http://dnaadoption.com/index.php?page=online-classes>

Gale has lived in Texas all his life and worked for IBM in the U.S. Space program at NASA's Johnson Space Center for 26 years and is now retired. His work with commercial imaging technology and document management has enhanced his genealogy organization and presentation. He received the IBM Outstanding Contribution Award, NASA's Apollo Achievement Award, and the NASA First Shuttle Flight Achievement Award for Manned Flight Awareness.

March Program Recap

Thank you to Nancy Royce for discussing the history of the Virginia territory development into the state of Kentucky and the paper trail it left behind. Nancy's handout is packed with references to available resources in print at the Clayton Library and online. She stressed that there are not enough records to trace a direct line back in time, and recommended we must research the entire family and friends to locate enough information to piece together a family story.

Nancy discussed Virginia Chancery records as a good resource for early 1700's. These are court documents ruling fairness in civil matters such as divisions of estates, land disputes, divorce petitions, and business partnership issues. Search and view original digitized papers of the Chancery records online at VirginiaMemory.com (digital library provided by Library of Virginia). Access the collection directly at www.virginiamemory.com/collections/chancery Scroll down and click on search index and use surname field to search the records.

Interested in 17th and 18th centuries Virginia's county records? The Library of Virginia has "A Guide to Virginia County and City Records on Microfilm" published online at www.lva.virginia.gov/public/local Scroll down to choose a specific county and then you will see tables listing what records and dates are available. Many of the films can be borrowed for free through inter-library loan using your local public library. There is a 5 reel limit per person. Access Kentucky Digital Library collections at <http://kdl.kyvl.org>.

The University of Texas Perry-Castañeda Library in Austin has a map collection of more than 250,000 maps, with less than 30% of the collection currently digitized. Under the United States historical maps section, there is a wonderful map detailing exploration routes and settlements between 1675 and 1800. Access this map at www.lib.utexas.edu/maps/united\_states/exploration\_1675.jpg and download for closer look.

The Missing Man: Book Review

The Missing Man is Nathan Dylan Goodwin's newest book (novella) in the Morton Farrier, Forensic Genealogist, series of Genealogical Crime Mysteries, available on Amazon.com as eBook and paperback. Mr. Goodwin's books combine genealogy, history and mystery. This book may inspire you to follow a different research path to locate a parent.

The following book review was provided by member Barbara Moore

Morton Farrier, the forensic genealogist of the story is off on another mystery; this time to the United States. I was drawn into this book by the drab cemetery scene on the cover. Perched on a headstone was a red cardinal. I knew it had to be a clue to something in the story.

Morton is newly married; he and Juliette travel to Boston Massachusetts where his research has led him. The missing man he seeks is his own father, whom he has never seen. He finds the pathway through relatives is a crooked road with bridges some people don't care to cross.

I was not able to put this copy down until finished. Nathan has a unique method of taking you with one character from the past toward the end, while allowing you to travel back in time with Morton Farrier at the same time. This is a wonderful weaving of suspense and adventure.

Want to know more about forensic genealogy research methods? Read a short online article "Forensic Genealogy – Dead Men Do Tell Tales" by Nancy Siddons-Daniels published October 6, 2012 at www.recordclick.com/forensic-genealogy-dead-men-do-tell-tales
